Oh! How Television (and Radio) has changed over the years.....

Late last November Channel 4 confirmed that they would not be renewing their contract with Sky TV. In short this means that channel 4 will no longer be scrambled, and will be available free to anybody with a suitable satellite system. With the exception of Channel 5, ALL British terrestrial channels (BBC!, 2, 3, 4 ITV, ITV 2, 3, 4 Channel 4) will now be available via satellite subscription free. While going to press Channel 4 also announced the launch of their new High Definition channel (more on that next month).

February: Latin for "Februa" a ceremonial feast of purification held by the Romans centuries ago every February 15th. The early Saxons renamed February "Sol-Monath" - sun month because of the returning sun after winter.

The December meeting met on Monday 3rd December at 8pm in OLH.

Tidy Towns: Graffiti on both sides at the top of Coliemore Road was reported and cleaned by DLRCC. This is an expensive and difficult type of operation and perpetrators should be reported.

Sports: The 40th AGM of the Dublin Community Games took place on the 6th November 2007 in Carmichael House. There will be National Finals on 3 weekends in 2008. Mosney is the venue for 2008. A sub-committee will be set up to locate another venue.

AOB: The public car park at the Coliemore Apartments will be pursued with the Enforcement Section of DLRCC. A member suggested that DCC should contact the Heritage Officer, Tim Carey as the parking down at the harbour has become much more difficult due to the painting of double yellow lines on both sides of the road. As there was no further business the meeting ended.

The first meeting of DCC for 2008 took place on Monday 7th January in OLH at 8pm.

Planning: Residents from Ardbrough Road have contacted DCC in connection with the implementation of double yellow lines by DLRCC. These lines run on the northern side of Ardbrough Road for a length of 130 metres. The residents were not consulted about this measure and many of them have been left with nowhere to park their cars. DCC can confirm that they were in no way involved with this decision taken by DLRCC. It was agreed that DCC would arrange to meet the residents after Christmas.

❖ DALKEY TIDY TOWNS REPORT to DCC - January 2008 ❖

During 2007 An Taisce carried out a survey of 50 towns and cities for Irish Business Against Litter (IBAL). The survey concluded that overall the State's litter problem is improving, with 22 towns now achieving "litter-free" status, compared to just two towns when it was first conducted in 2002. The current four black spots, in descending order of dirtiness, are: Mallow, Co Cork, Tallaght in west Dublin, Nenagh, Co Tipperary, and Sligo. I have to say that it is only by chance that Dalkey is not included in this list.

The Bottle Bank at Dalkey Station was once more seriously abused over Christmas. Domestic rubbish was dumped as well as bottles. I know that the bins were full at times during the holiday period but this is no excuse for dumping as we have another facility nearby at Killiney Hill. Dumping of domestic rubbish must be reported. Often it can be identified and the culprits fined. Tel. numbers are on the back page of every newsletter.

February Litter Patrol Schedule; to which residents are welcome;

Tuesday 5 Feb	- meeting 10.30	at Select Stores
Saturday 9 Feb	- meeting 10.30	at the church gates
Thursday 21 Feb	- meeting 11.00	at Dillon's Park

A 'Care for our Environmental Lecture' is planned for February and support would be appreciated from the community. Details will be announced shortly.

Thank you, June Barnett, Secretary, DTT.

❖ LITTER MATTERS ❖

Litter is an on-going problem for ALL areas, and is constantly highlighted in the Tidy Towns Reports each year.

But what is "litter"? The dictionary defines it as "untidy rubbish dropped in public places". As far as the Litter Act is concerned, "Litter" can be a matchstick, a sweet paper, a cigarette butt, bags of all kinds, gum, cans, bottles, juice and food cartons, etc. the list is almost endless.

Some people seem to think that by dropping litter they are "creating a job", as was the case in the 1950s when it was necessary to create as many jobs as possible to prevent emigration.

Now, the attitude is "somebody is paid to clean that up!" WRONG!

People are no longer paid to clean up rubbish. County Councils all over the country are constantly cutting budgets and one of the many things which suffers is ROAD SWEEPING. Apart from Castle Street in Dalkey, how many times have you noticed the Road Sweeping Truck clean other roads in the area? You could count on one hand the number of times it has been spotted around the locality.

Recently, the Litter Fine has been increased from 125 to 150 with a much stiffer fine if the offender is taken to Court and convicted.

Residents of all areas should notice and record any activity which results in litter of any kind, but particularly bags of litter, including drink cans and bottles being dumped in their area. Such activities should be reported to the Litter Warden in Dun Laoghaire Rathdown County Council for action to be taken.

Dalkey.

DR. WRIGHTS 'OULD' BOYS

In the 1930s young lads in Dalkey began using a field that lay between Carysfort and Church Roads. The field was owned by a genial old G.P., Dr. Wright.

There were numerous fields around the Dalkey area both before and after the Second World War but attempts by young boys to play a game of football, cricket or any other field games usually ended by the lads being chased out of the fields. Dr. Wright's field was the local field where games could be played without any worry of the game being interrupted except by fading light or breaks for teatime.

Many lads who played on that field went on to have successful and enjoyable careers in football over the years. The list is extensive, too long to include here but anybody fortunate enough to be still around will recall the names of Peter Farrell who was the greatest to "graduate" from that hallowed piece of land. Peter played most of his career with Everton in the English League as it was then called, this followed a great few years when he played on one of the greatest Shamrock Rovers teams in the early 1940s. He was a star with Rovers while a schoolboy. He played 28 times for Ireland and captained them when he played his first game against Portugal on Sunday, 16th June, 1946 in Lisbon. Overall, he captained Ireland on 12 occasions.

Paddy Fox played League of Ireland for many years as did Harry Hill who also played for Huddersfield Town in the English 1st Division. Both received Amateur and Junior Caps respectively for Ireland during their distinguished careers.

The field was sold in 1953 when Dr. Wright dies and Carysfort Drive stands on the site of the football field that meant so much to Dalkey lads over many years.

In 1953 Peter Farrell led Everton to victory and back into the First Division having been playing 2nd Division for a couple of years.

The late Jack Dowd from Church Road suggested that a function should be held to make the closing of the field and Peter's achievements with Everton.

A dinner was organised in the old Beechwood Hotel off Ballinclea Road to mark the occasions. A committee was formed for the purpose. The President was "the Doc", Dr. Eamonn Kenny, Hon. Sec. Paddy Flynn and Treasurer Jim (Gus) Farrell.

For forty five years a re-union dinner was held annually in various venues, with some as far as Woodenbridge were booked in the name of "Dr. Wright's Ould Boys". The staffs, some of the non-Dalkey venues were under the impression that they were entertaining a group of medical people! That great character and eminent member of the "Ould Boys", the late Paddy 'Mochy' Duggan often remarked after being addressed as "Doctor" by waiters for hours after said: "Thanks be to the Ja....they don't know who we really are or we would not have been let into the place!"

The Dr. Wright's Ould Boys - you could write a book on them: it would be a long story. One fact that could not be included in it is the identity of the person who bestowed the title on the group. His or her identity has been lost in the mists of time

We attended the Blessed Sacrament Procession and saw the sick gathered in Rosary Square for a blessing. The Candlelight Procession is extraordinary as it winds its way around the square. The boys' voices rang out with 'The Lourdes Ave' and, of course, 'The Bells of the Angelus'. For adults and boys it was a wonderful experience.

After our four days in Lourdes the long journey north to Le Harve started. We stayed overnight in Poitiers in a hostel and said goodbye to Leon at Le Harve. A pleasant, storm-free journey to Rosslare followed and the trip to Dalkey ended a school tour that was different for each of us. A treasured memory.

❖ NEWS FROM DALKEY TABLE TENNIS CLUB ❖

The venue, as you already know, is Cuala Sports Stadium, Hyde Road. Wednesday mornings 10.30 am to 12.30 pm. The club is thriving but nevertheless new members of all ages are always welcome.

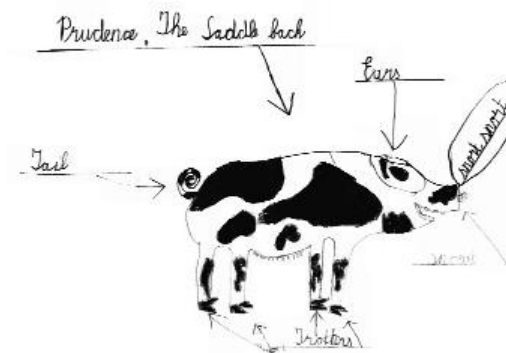

Our Christmas Tournament on 19th December 2007 was a great success. EuroSpar presented us with two beautifully engraved silver plaques.

This presentation was made by our President, Eva, with 1st prize awarded to Noreen Egan and Mary Boushell (jointly). The Runner-Up prize went to Eileen Williams and Philippa Thomas. Congratulations to both groups.

Afterwards we had a party upstairs. The committee served delicious buns and mince pies with cream. Next was Santa Claus (i.e. myself dressed in full Santa costume!) who distributed gifts to all the members. The morning was great fun with many photographs taken. I'll finish by wishing all of you a Happy, Peaceful and Prosperous New Year.

❖ VISIT TO AIRFIELD – NOVEMBER 2007 ❖

We walked down to Cuala to get a bus to Airfield. The journey was fun but long. We eventually got to airfield and went into a big room. It was filled with chairs for just about everyone. They talked to us about the purpose of nature. Every animal had job. Then we split into 2 groups. I thought that we would feed the chickens but we went to look at the house. It was HUGE. We then went to feed the donkeys and their names were Smoky-Joe and Michael. Then we went for a run. We fed the ponies. We saw a frog! It was s very slow one! After that we had our lunch. Then we saw the cars. Every member of the family had a car. They had their own petrol station. We then fed the chickens. It was so exciting. I loved it! My neighbour is the leader of Dalkey Tidy Towns. This has been a very good school tour. I would like to thank Tidy Towns and the Parents Association.

❖ NATURE CORNER – Michael Ryan ❖

Although usually very happy to attract wildlife to my garden I'd have reservations about playing host to wasps' nests. We've had them in the garden before, usually finding the nest after it has been abandoned when you can admire the wonderful wood pulp weaving artistry of the nests with their spiralling patterns resembling photographs of the planet Jupiter. As I mentioned before we've preserved some wasps nests held together with liberal quantities of hair spray and they're wonderful demonstrations of animal architecture. I've also got a collection of Blue Tit's nests taken from nest boxes in the garden (they way they're compressed could give the impression that blue tits build square nests) kept in the greenhouse and late one summer wasps began to build their nest on top of one of those. Anyway it's one thing having wasps nest in the garden but an entirely different matter when they're in or very near the house.

In early summer last year before the warm weather took a downward turn we'd noticed a large wasp, evidently a queen, flying into a space between the hall door frame and the rough granite facing on the wall. Couldn't imagine there would be much space in there to build a nest and after half hearted attempts to block the space didn't think too much about it. The weather turned cool and wet and summer moved on and it was quite a surprise when we noticed a string of wasps flying in and out of the little space.

They rarely came into the house flying in and out of the nest with great purpose (you could say 'making a bee line' to the nest), very diligent workers who were all in bed by dusk. We were never stung by them though they did sting the dog a couple of times after which she kept well away from them. But it was quite intimidating having wasps flying by one's ear or clipping your hair and clothes as they buzzed past and you'd literally keep your mouth shut going out, a gobful of wasp being a unhealthy prospect! It was also a big a cause of concern for any visitors. It was interesting, and a little alarming to find out that when you kill an individual wasp it sends out a signal to the rest of the hive who will become very aggressive.

Reluctantly I got a chemical spray whose name Wasp Nest Destroyer in bold yellow type out of a black background left no doubt about its purpose. The warning notices on the can stated it should only be sold to local authorities or pest specialists, you shouldn't inhale it, you should wash any clothes that got contaminated and immediately wash off any that got on your skin. Wearing a medical face mask under a scarf wrapped tightly around my face I sneaked up on the nest at night and sprayed the deadly chemical into the entrance almost emptying the container into it. I didn't get any pleasure out of doing it but knew if the nest had been disturbed and we'd had a confrontation with the wasps we were heavily outnumbered and would have come out worse. I'd watched them a few times piling into the opening at dusk, hundreds probably thousands of them and if they'd come into the house it could have been disastrous. In the morning I was surprised to see a few wasps buzzing around on the wrong side of the entrance looking as if they were trying to get in but evidently repelled by the chemical residue. I wondered if all the wasps in the nest actually stay in it at night or maybe there wasn't enough room and they slept somewhere else in the garden returning to work in the morning. A few of them looked dazed but quite a few looked healthy enough and by the following evening it was business as usual, dozens of wasps coming and going. The nest must have been well in under the floorboards far enough away from the deadly spray. Eventually I thought, well it's nearly the end of the summer and they'll be gone soon, we'll wait it out. At the end of their breeding season all the wasps die off apart from the queens who leave the nest, survive the winter then start a new nest.

TOUR LA DIFFERENCE

Since I started teaching in the mid-sixties school tours took place annually. When I taught in Arklow generally the tour took us to Dublin. When I came to Dalkey we went to the country. Some of the places we visited were Enniscorthy, Pottery in Arklow, Turlough Hill, Drogheda, Monasterboice, Hill of Tara, Glendalough, on the Shannon to Clonmacnoise and one year we went to Lough Allen in Roscommon.

The school year 1982/83 was different. I don't know how many primary schools had school tours outside the country then. With very enthusiastic parents, the Principal, Proinsias, and Fr. Paul, the chaplain, it was decided to travel to France and Lourdes in particular under the umbrella of Cantores Christi. The Department of Education would allow it on that basis. It was now up to the school to fundraise and Proinsias to teach the choir.

By Christmas '82 all the plans had been made and fundraising and choir training had begun. The choir was chosen from the boys from 4th to 6th classes and this meant that 40 boys with parents, Fr. Paul and two teachers, Proinsias and myself, would travel to France on the 12th May 1983.

Proinsias produced a booklet containing hymns for each person travelling and on page 13 he gave advice to the boys in this way: - "They are expected to do Ireland proud." As is often said nowadays, he saw the bigger picture.

On the afternoon of the 12th May we gathered in the church car-park for the bus to Rosslare. A school uniform was not worn then but badges with the Dalkey Coat-of-Arms and the school name were pinned to each boy's jumper. About 52 people in all were travelling. Well-wishers cheered as the bus set off for Rosslare.

We boarded the ship for a 20 hour journey to Le Harve. Ominously, the wind had risen! We sailed out into St. George's Channel and down to Land's End and it was about midnight when we got to that point. The wind continued to rise and, speaking for myself, I was too! It was just a matter of lying down and hoping we'd survive. It was said that night that even the sailors were sick! As we sailed into Le Harve about mid-day on a very placid sea it was hard to believe what had happened during the night.

Leon, our bus driver for the next two weeks was waiting for us. We were soon on our way to Paris. We spent two nights there and visited Notre Dame, Montmartre, Pompidou Centre, the Eiffel Tower and the Irish College. At that time the college was a centre for students and priests from Poland. Fr. Paul said Mass and the boys sang out 'Ag Chríost an Síol' in a little bit of Ireland in Paris. It was a treat to walk around the quadrangle of the college and see the names of all the Irish dioceses etched in stone. We also visited Versailles and in the building and grounds we wondered at the opulence created by Louis XIV, the Sun King!

When we left Paris our destination was Blois in the Loire Valley. On the way we stopped in Chartres and gazed in awe at the brilliant blue in Chartres Cathedral. We reached the hotel in Blois and we stayed in this lovely, leafy town for one night. In the dining rooms of each hotel we stayed in, the boys sang before and after the meals and the other guests clapped and asked about the crest worn by the boys. Proinsias conducted and a hymn 'as Gaeilge' was always on the menu!

We departed early from Blois for the long journey south via Bordeaux. Although we didn't stop in Bordeaux, I remember crossing the Garonne River on a very high bridge. By evening we had passed through Pau and shortly after that we arrived in Lourdes.

What amazed me about Lourdes were the contrasts. On the one hand, the commercialism of the town with the sale of religious objects and, on the other hand, the peace and quiet of the Grotto area. Walking around or saying a prayer there late at night is something I will always remember.

Thought they'd be gone in late summer but there were still lots of them there in October and if any 'trick or treaters' had arrived before dark at Halloween they might have got a nasty response. The mild autumn weather probably caused their prey to survive while the nest itself was probably near a central heating pipe so no chance they were going to freeze at night. I heard a radio DJ reading out letters about wasps and one said the latest the writer had removed a live nest was on Christmas Eve! Ours were there in early December but didn't make it through to the New Year and thankfully didn't stay to share the holiday with us.

Elder berries are highly desired by birds and usually the bush is cleared of them in early autumn by hungry blackbirds and wood pigeons. The last week of December seemed very early to have new leaves unfolding on an Elder bush although this bush was towards the east side of Dalkey Hill in the milder mini climate of Killiney Bay above Vico Road. It is on the Vico Road where for years I've seen the first unfolding buds on a Horse Chestnut tree though that isn't usually till the early days of March so don't know if this is another indication of global warming or just a plant that's found a warm niche for itself.

The Little Egret, in appearance like a snow white heron with black legs and yellow feet would have been a cause of great excitement if it was seen in Ireland fifteen years ago but now they breed in many counties and they can be seen almost anywhere there's water, even in the little stream behind Spar in Deansgrange. A recent winter count in Booterstown Marsh, constantly improving as a feeding and roosting area, had more than 1600 hundred Knot, a small plump wading bird and over 1,000 Dunlin but if you're passing on a dart the bird that's most likely to stand out, especially on dull winter days, is the Little Egret.

Many people who leave out food for birds in their garden were saying earlier this winter they didn't have many birds coming to their feeders. It might be down to the mild weather but it's often noticed that birds become more reliant on food left out for them only after their wild food has run out when all the choicest berries are gone and the insects are hibernating or have died off, so if you have been putting out peanuts and sunflower seeds keep doing so as they could be most useful now for birds survival.

I'd seen Blackcaps in the bird bath and foraging in bushes in late autumn but it was only in the bitter cold days of January that they began to feed on the halved apples I'd left out. Siskins are another species which are more commonly seen in gardens after Christmas although once they do arrive they might stay till April before returning to conifer woods to breed. Usually facing downwards when feeding on peanut holders they're very busy little birds often chattering from nearby trees and bushes. It's thought a lot of the siskins that come to our gardens are actually visitors from the continent.

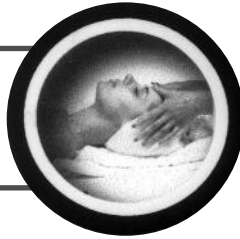

New and very welcome visitors to my garden this winter were a pair of Jays who perched in an apple tree seemed to check out the peanut feeders but didn't take any. Hope they'll be back. They're still to be seen on Killiney Hill but being secretive often just seen as a fleeting glimpse of a blue wing flash or white rump patch.

The Brent Geese that fly from Sandymount to Wicklow every day and back again in the evening will continue to grow in number peaking in late March or early April before they all fly off north to breed in Arctic Canada. Their food will have got scarce around Dublin Bay and it's evidently worth the energy they burn off on the long return journey in return for the food they'll get in Wicklow. They fly down along the coast through Dalkey Sound across Killiney Bay and down to Kilcoole and Newcastle on the coast where they will spend the day grazing in fields, sometimes in either of the Birdwatch Ireland reserves

❖ THE DARK SECRET OF DALKEY ISLAND ❖

Just before Christmas the Currach Press published the latest work by Brian Mac Aongusa called "Hidden Streams" in which he brings the reader on a voyage of discovery into the past of that part of south County Dublin which we know today as Dun Laoghaire-Rathdown and whose history has been influenced by many of the rivers and streams in this area which number over 30. By tracing the history of these rivers and streams which were important in this history of the lives of all those who settled in the area, this remarkable book contains a fascinating history of this area and the origin and developments of the various towns in this area.

Brian points out that while we may consider the Vikings as pillagers and plunderers, they were not afraid to interact with the native Irish from the point of commerce and language and that by the 10th century the Irish were not afraid to adopt Viking names. Equally, Vikings were not afraid to adopt Irish names and many Norse words crept into the Irish language. Vikings engaged in farming and developed many urban settlements.

But a darker side of the Vikings was their use of slavery as from the 9th century the Vikings took slaves and used them as labour in various settlements outside Ireland. The Vikings realised that prisoners of war could be sold as slaves, something that was later copied by the Irish with Dublin becoming the centre of a very lucrative slave trade in prisoners of war at a time when there were many internal political struggles within the Irish.

Brian reveals that the Vikings used Dalkey Island as a holding camp for their slaves where they were kept in chains until shipped out. It is recorded that that the abbot of Killeigh was held in this camp after being sold at auction in Dublin when no ransom was received for him. In a desperate bid to escape he attempted to swim to the shore from the island but drowned in the attempt.

Taking prisoners for slavery ended after 1120 but for over 200 years Dalkey Island was the location for a Viking prison camp for Irish and foreign slaves destined for the Dublin market.

where they'll be undisturbed. It seems a long roundabout journey to make every day but they feel safer from predators spending the night by the coast in big flocks at Sandymount Strand or on the Bull Island so that brings them back up again every evening. There have been large numbers of Brent coming to Ireland this year and they had a very good breeding season last year with lots of juveniles returning with them. Although they go down in the morning in little groups they often come back all together very near dusk. Often it's nearly dark when they return and you'll hear them honking before you see them. It's a spectacular sight seeing thousands of geese appearing out of the gloom in flying V's. Sorrento Park and Colimore Harbour are good places to see them from.

❖ LETTER TO THE EDITOR ❖

Re.: PARKING ON BARNHILL ROAD

Sir,

Isn't it time that car parking on Barnhill Road was prohibited? I have counted as much as eight cars partially parked on the footpath in that part of the road from the bridge to the roundabout. It is often necessary, when a buggy is approaching, to leave the path and step on to the main road in the face of oncoming traffic. For older people this presents a serious hazard. I thought we had a traffic warden in Dalkey.

Surely, this time of the year has to be great: - this start of a new gardening year, another opportunity to try new ideas, cuttings as well as putting into further swing, your old reliables and trusted favourites. Sometimes, I think our garden looks at its best in the rain when all those amazing shades of green glisten and shine, stone work stands out and everywhere seems to look 'cleaner' in the rain. Even our own 'bottomless pit' type of garden looks good!

This winter, I decided to leave most of our perennial flower stems and spent seed heads as they can lend their own grace and beauty to the garden. Also, some seed heads can be a vital food source and supply for small birds. Obviously, I have removed the odd, unsightly frost-eaten clump here and there.

I find many types of weed seedlings are capable of growth during these mild winters and early spring days. In fact, it can be quite staggering the amount of progress they can make in these supposedly 'dormant' months. This morning, after pouring my last drop of coffee into my mug, I decided to tackle our plumbago (conservatory climber with powdery-blue clusters of tiny flowers) and then two hibiscuses (very showy plants when in flower - again, ours are conservatory house plants). As this particular day was a Saturday, my husband had a field day doing a similar job outside with our cestrum fasciculatum Mexico, height 5-8 ft, lanceolate mid-green leaves with clusters of salmon-red funnel-like flowers on slender arching growth, - evergreen).

Pruning most houseplants early in the season along with some watering and feeding will bring on new growth quickly. One of the most flamboyant plants, (indoor and outdoors) that can be overlooked is the Abutilon (native to Brazil and tropical areas of India and Asia). There are many varieties of abutilons, ranging from sumptuous reds, rose pinks to citrus shades and then pure whites. They, typically, have soft tissue in pendulous nodding flowers with evergreen leaves. Each bud seems to open out somewhat like a swirl of petals that seems to flare or frill out like some incredible (miniature!) elegant and dainty ballgown. Our various abulitons have flowered every single day of every single week of every single month throughout this past year (indoors and that's been with little and, sometimes, no heating. Their big show of flowers is in the summer). Obviously, ours are at this stage, look a little leggy and woody but I'm in no hurry to prune them as I have a few small cuttings that I can replace them with when the time arises. Sometimes, I think it can be interesting to allow a plant to follow through its whole cycle, (left to do its own thing 'fly its kite' so to speak!) It can be most interesting to observe its durability, its acquired shape and habit for survival.

Isn't there a special feeling of tranquillity about working outside in the garden at this time when all around you seems to be still resting- your only company being a cheeky robin perched on the handle of your spade or a blackbird chirping in a nearby tree who seems to be watching your every move with something that looks like his approval. Remember, any work done outside now is an investment for the summer months to come. This morning I noticed some little spring bulbs trying to force their way through some of our most inhospitable soil in order to brave the elements and show off their little faces. Any little display/container of bulbs, especially miniatures, looks such a treat at this time of year.

Now is the time to enjoy planning our little gardens for these oncoming spring and summer months. I think it is important to bring as much meaning to your garden as possible. This meaning can be quirky, open, simple, busy, dramatic or very private. You can decide, so to speak, to create a 'motel' room, a 'hotel' room or a 'home' in your garden. A little bit of advice, if I may, please do not overdo the ornaments! One or two good pieces that act as focal points, I think, have a far greater impact and dramatic effect than a host of ornaments; - that can, ultimately, turn your precious little garden into the next bric-a-brack sale or junk yard!

Seeing Red! – Since we lost our gorgeous Mr. Reubens, our ruby Cavalier King Charles some months ago, I have been taking a keener interest in our surrounding local birds. Have you noticed too, Applicant Name & Location: Amanda & Donal Coyle, 3, Marley House, Saval Park Road, Dalkey.

Proposal: Retention and completion of development to previously approved scheme Reg. Ref. D06A/1690. The proposed works for retention and completion are generally in response to Condition 3 of Reg. Ref. D06A/1690 imposed by Dun Laoghaire Rathdown County Council, which required alterations to the design of the house. The proposed development is in accordance with the intentions of condition 3, however minor modifications are that most of our birds seem to have a particular fondness for eating red and black berries rather than other colours? Someone told me recently, on inquiring, that these are the colours in a bird's visual spectrum that stand out best against green leaves and foliage. On that note, my husband squealed with delight, one day last week and shouted at me to come quickly to our kitchen window. There, perched on one of our Portuguese Laurels, was a magnificent goldfinch (14 cm long, burgundy red face, yellow on his wings and tail) eating insistently the black Niger seeds (cost 2.50 per bag from The Dalkey Pet Shop) in one of our bird feeders. It was an absolutely thrilling sight and I think, every day since I have spotted two goldfinches (I wonder, are they 'partners'?) My husband said that he has not seen these birds since he was a little boy in Wales. So, go on, forget that second pint or creamy cup of coffee and go out and treat yourself to a bird feeder: - there is a special type of bird feeder that holds Niger seed, so make sure to ask for it and then your 'very good value' bag of black Niger seed, which should last a long time as the seed is so fine. It may take a month or so before these birds decide to trust you and your surroundings. Yesterday, I bought a bag of meal worms. They are freeze dried. Meal worms attract blue tits, great tits, blackbirds, wrens, robins and thrushes. I've just been reading on its packet that these meal worms can be re-hydrated by soaking them in warm water for 15 minutes or until soft. My friend, Morlin also bought the same packet of meal worms. Her intention is to coax her robins to feed from her hand. We shan't hold our breath! I will let you know how she fares.

❖ DALKEY CC LTD. ANNUAL ART EXHIBITION ❖

10th & 11th November, 2007 – Our Lady's Hall, Dalkey

Guest-of-Honour: Mr. John Waters

The Exhibition was opened on Friday, 10th November by Mr. John Waters, journalist, commentator and local resident. Opening the exhibition, he spoke about the paintings, the power of landscapes on our lives and how he came to live in Dalkey. He then stayed to mingle with the artists and guests among these was Ms. Mary Hanafin, T.D., Minister for Education & Science as well as An Cathaoirleach, Cllr. Denis O'Callaghan.

Ninety three paintings were exhibited and varied in both subject and style. Fourteen were sold. John Holland's wood turnings proved as popular as ever, many being bought for Christmas presents.

Many people came in to the exhibition over the two days, remarking on the high standard of the paintings exhibited.

I would like to thank all those who helped with all aspects of the Exhibition. All help is much appreciated and thanks also to the artists who allowed us to show their works; it's a pleasure to meet them every year.

DUBAI 1

Crazy, crazy country I am glad I went. Shop till you drop is the main attraction so you need lots of cash and energy. If shopping were an Olympic sport, Dubai would win the gold medal. The shopping is divided into huge shopping malls or souks which is a special market. The gold souk, the silver souk, an herb souk and on and on. Temptation all around especially if you have a credit card! Dubai is one of the United Arab Emirates. The rulers of the seven emirates are all descendants of the Sheik Maktoum family. They have gone to great lengths to ensure the local heritage and Bedouin traditions and skills still remain. The national dress for men is a white dishdasha and is worn with a headdress called ghutra and, of course, they fiddle with their prayer beads. The women wear black; some of the older women will wear a mask called a burkha. You are very conscious that it is a male city. We were at a barbeque and when we queued for the food we were divided, men on the right, women on the left and the men were served first. The official religion is Islam and mosques are just everywhere; the various other religions are tolerated, especially Christianity. We were very impressed with the packed Catholic, very well organised Mass. Mass times are 5.30. a.m., 7.30 a.m., 10.30 a.m. and 11.30 a.m. and two Masses in the evening, Tea and coffee were served after Mass. There is no graffiti and practically no crime. If they offend a few times, they disappear (so our guide told us), drugs are not tolerated and drink driving is a 'no no'. We went on a cruise to the Dubai Creek, one glass of wine per person for our New Year Gala Dinner which was followed by a fireworks display to sing in the New Year. I never hugged so many Indians and Filipinos. We chatted with them and they were in Dubai simply to earn lots of money for their families at home. We also went on a desert safari and BBQ where we had one hour 'dune bashing' in four-wheel drives. It was total madness for our age group. All was forgiven when we tasted the sumptuous oriental buffet. A belly dancer and a henna lady to tattoo us. Our final day we went to lunch at the Burj Al Arab. It is the largest hotel in the world and has a coveted seven stars. We had to pay 120 in advance to book our lunch. Fifteen of our group had to go so I was lucky I had drawn the number. The building is all gold and glass. The floors are marble with matching carpets, gold and blue in colour. The restaurant reminded me of a beautiful art gallery. We were on the 27th floor with magnificent views of The Palms and The World, two more of the Emirates. The started was tiny pieces of cooked fish very glamourously presented. Then each person was assigned a chef who cooked the vegetables on the spot. The meat was already cooked. I just had about ten vegetables and roast eye of beef and then to the desserts. Sheer heavenly and artistically designed. Just mouthfuls, I sampled about seven - sheer gluttony, but yum! Coffee and water were an extra thirty-five Euro but it was all worth it.

MAST UPDATE

On January 10th An Bord Pleanála refused the erection of a 30 metre high replacement telecommunications mast on the grounds that:

The proposed development, by reason of its scale, location and design, would materially and adversely affect the character and setting of a protected structure, Dalkey Garda Station, and would detract from the visual amenity of the wider Dalkey area. The proposed development would, therefore, be contrary to the proper planning and sustainable development of the area.

On behalf of the committee, I would like to thank all the residents who gave their support, feeling that Dalkey would pay too high a price in the name of technological progress. I would also like to thank members of Dun Laoghaire Rathdown County Council whom we hope will support us again should new plans be submitted in the future.
