❖ Summary of Dalkey Community Council October Meeting

DCC Monthly Meeting was held on Monday 14th October 2019 in OLH.

TT: Congratulations to DTT on their success in the National Tidy Towns Competition (see page 47). Work is continuing on cleaning up Library Lane and DTT are in discussion with SuperValu to tidy up the outside surrounds of the store and the car park area. Weeds are quite a problem throughout the town and area and a satisfactory and environmentally method has to be found to tackle them. Residents are encouraged to take pride in their own areas and help maintain them.

NW: The Gardai advise everyone to be security conscious as the darker evenings are here and the Christmas rush is beginning to gain momentum.

Planning: BHPA attended the High Court and have been granted leave for a Judicial Review. The case will probably be held in spring next year.

The next Monthly Meeting is Monday 11th November 2019.

❖ DALKEY CASTLE & HERITAGE CENTRE UPDATE

SEASONAL VARIATIONS AT DALKEY CASTLE

ECHOES Maeve Binchy and Irish Writers on the first weekend in October was an outstanding success. People came from Holland, Germany, Norway, UK and US and from all over Ireland. Now in its third year, having started from small beginnings with the support of DLRCoCo, the events were at full capacity this year. ECHOES is the only literary festival with the work of Maeve Binchy at its heart.

Living History Tours continue daily right throughout the year. DLR Spring, Summer and Winter programmes are highly popular. Tours groups from CIE finish late October and will resume in March 2020. Languages School Groups continue to grow and are now spread throughout the year. Corporate packages are getting popular with evening living history bookings, bodhrán sessions and dinner locally in Dalkey.

Seasonal There are seasonal variations with appropriate themes and scripts devised for Halloween and Christmas.

Halloween Tours are geared for children on mid-term break and have all the expected themes for those going trick or treating.

The Witches have taken over Dalkey Castle. The children will be enlisted to help the Archer find the best of his arrows to banish them to the hills!

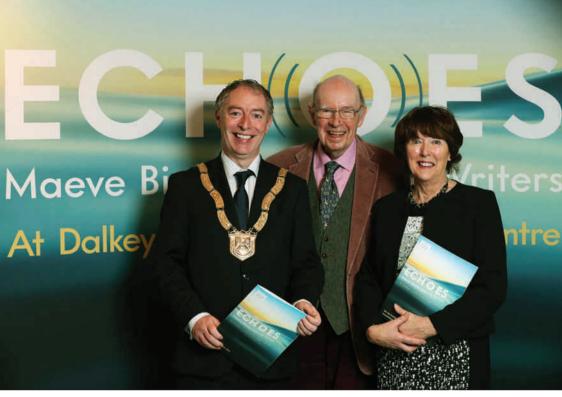

Any ghostly presence? Outside, they can pick their steps around haunted ruins and watch out for a resident ghost, the ancient protector of the Castle.

The Jack O'Lantern will ward off evil spirits. If they stand in The Murder Room of the Castle, there is little chance that they will dodge through the terrible things that descend through The Murder Hole.

Vikings too! Each Halloween, watch out for the ghostly Viking warriors, who captured slaves and imprisoned them on Dalkey Island. The slaves often sought sanctuary in the old church. We expect the Vikings back to look for them! Pay the Viking taxes, or 'you will pay through the nose'.

Mint your own Viking coins to go into the Halloween Barmbrack. Weave magic spells with the good witch around her cauldron and much more fun and games besides.

Dates: Afternoons Monday 28th October & Wednesday 30th at 14.00, 15.00 & 16.00. Morning Thursday only: 31st October at 11.00 & 12.00. (Closed Tuesday 29th October).

Castle Christmas Tours with Santa will be coming up on the weekends in December. These were hugely popular last year, and very positive feedback was the order of the day. Christmas presents

Saint John Henry Newman

Cardinal John Henry Newman (and four women) were canonised by Pope Francis at the Vatican on October 13th 2019.

John Henry Newman was born in London in 1801. He was the eldest of six children. At the age of fifteen, he experienced a conversion and he became very devout. When he was sixteen, he began a course of studies at Oxford which lasted for nine years.

He was ordained in the Anglican Church in 1825.

The Oxford Movement Newman was so passionate about church reform and the observance of pure religion that he and his friends started a movement to identify the links with the early church fathers and to reform the High Anglican Church.

By 1844, his studies led him to leave the Anglican Church and was received into the Roman Catholic Church in 1845. He was sent to Rome, where he was ordained priest in 1847. He set up two Oratories, one in Birmingham and one in London.

Archbishop Paul Cullen asked him to become Rector of a proposed new Catholic University in Dublin in 1851 (later UCD) Newman delivered a set of lectures in Dublin entitled The Scope and Nature of University Education. This text was studied in secondary schools in Ireland as late as the 1970s. It is a masterpiece in outlining the true meaning of education where learning is valued for its enriching qualities rather than simply a preparation for a job.

Newman and Dalkey By the summer of 1854, John Henry was exhausted after the Achilli trial and working tirelessly on the university project. He had been travelling between Dublin and Birmingham. With the opening of the university imminent, he asked his assistant, Fr Ambrose St John, to find a house for him in Dublin where he could spend a few months on a working holiday.

Mount Salus: When Newman first saw Mount Salus, in Dalkey, he wrote: I think it is one of the most beautiful places I ever saw. With the new university due to open in Dublin on 3rd November 1854, he arranged to rent the house for September and October. One of the rooms in the house was converted into an oratory.

Writing to his sister, Newman noted: The Wicklow Mountains are seen out of one window, Howth and Kingstown out of the other. I have never seen a place out of Italy and Sicily like it for beauty of rock and sea.... Here is all granite. During his two month stay in Dalkey, Newman and his fellow priests, enjoyed many walks around the area, sometimes resulting in twisted ankles and injured legs.

Leaving – Newman left Mount Salus on 30th October 1854, and his new university opened in Dublin, three days later. Newman continued as rector of the Catholic University of Ireland until 1858, dividing his time between Dublin and Birmingham. In 1879, Pope, Leo XIII, created him Cardinal.

Death – Cardinal Newman died in Birmingham in 1890. He was beatified on 17th September 2010 by Pope Benedict

Father Forristal and Cardinal Newman – Fr Des Forristal late PP in Church of the Assumption, Dalkey, was an admirer and passionate advocate of Newman's thinking. He had a memorial plaque to Newman installed in the parish church. He also wrote Trial by Fury which dealt with the trial of John Henry Newman v Giacinto Achilli for criminal libel in 1852. He wrote a booklet called Newman in Dalkey.

October 13th 2019 was a historic day when former Dalkey resident Cardinal John Henry Newman was canonised by Pope Francis at the Vatican.

♦ FOLKLORE CORNER – DALKEY FUNERAL CUSTOMS

November is the traditional month that we associate with remembering loved ones who have departed.

In Ireland, the traditional belief was that the souls of the faithful departed would return to their family home on All Soul's Night. Care was needed to make them feel welcome. Rituals included sweeping the floor and preparing a good fire. Fresh spring water was placed on the table. Families would visit graves where loved ones were buried, make sure the gravesites were neat and tidy, and leave a candle burning. The door was to be left unlatched.

All Souls' Day is on the 2nd of November. That date is said to have been chosen by Saint Odilo of Cluny in the 11th century when he instituted for all the monasteries dependent on the Abbey of Cluny to observe an annual commemoration of all the Faithful Departed, to be the subject of alms, prayers, and sacrifices for the relief of the suffering souls in purgatory. The association with home was also observed at times of funerals.

It is an appropriate month therefore to print what Eddie Cahill, 5 Barnhill Road, Dalkey, 6th Standard, Harold Boys recorded on the 13th of January 1938 regarding the funeral customs observed in Dalkey. He entitled his piece 'Funeral Customs in Dalkey':

When people die in Dalkey the remains are brought to the church the night before the funeral by the shortest possible route. The funeral usually begins after a Mass the next morning. The remains are put in a hearse drawn by four black horses. The funeral goes by a roundabout way so that it passes the house of the deceased where it stops for a minute or two.

When it arrives at the cemetery the corpse is brought to the church in the cemetery where the priest says the last prayers. When the person is buried the priest recites a decade of the rosary over the grave.

He decided to illustrate the custom in a section he entitled 'Example':

"If the person lives on Carysfort Rd the hearse leaves the church and goes down Ulverton Rd and turns on to Carysfort Rd where it stops outside the house of the deceased for a minute or two. Then it goes up Patricks Rd and down the town and up Barnhill Road to the cemetery.

These customs are still carried out"

(The Schools' Collection, Volume 0798-9, Page 22)

Dalkey's Eire Excavation Reveals Treasured Family Connections

In September 1939, exactly 80 years ago, the Irish Defence Forces' Coast Watching Service was established. With 83 Look Out Posts (LOP) constructed along Ireland's coastline, operating 24 hours each day, they monitored and recorded all marine and aircraft activity during WW2. Floating mines, belligerent aircraft, submarines and much more were recorded. A total of 481 LOP logbooks have survived and are stored in Military Archives. While carrying out upgrading work in February 2017, Dalkey Tidy Towns unearthed the remains of a WW2 Searchlight base in Sorrento Park, now a beautiful viewing area. Long remains of a WW2 Searchlight base in Sorrento Park, now a beautiful viewing area. Long hours of research plus help from Dr Michael Kennedy and his book "Guarding Neutral Ireland", revealed details of the eleven men stationed there in 1939-45, three local Corporals and eight Volunteers. Six of their original LOP Logbooks are included in the Military Archives collection.

Although the Volunteers would have constructed an EIRE sign nearby, nobody knew where exactly it was located until an old black and white photo owned by neighbour Orla de Cogan came to light in 2018. Serious detective work then solved the problem!

In 1943, Corporal Charles Craney and the LOP No.7 team were instructed to find a suitable site, construct the letters EIRE in trenches measuring 12m by 6m and whitewash them for easy identification by aircraft. As we now know, a perfect location at Hawk Cliff below the Vico Road was selected. Numbered EIRE maps were passed to the USAF and RAF, of vital help to the Allies in the build up to D-Day on June 6th 1944. As WW2 came to an end, the Coast Watching Service was disbanded in June 1945. Without maintenance, nature took over those white stones and gradually many EIRE signs simply disappeared.

Completing 1,700 hours of hard labour, our Dalkey Tidy Towns team, with volunteers from Salesforce.com, US Bancorp, AIB and Hedderman Financial Services, took on the excavation challenge. Unearthing, cleaning and replacing 100 tons of buried stones, they then coated all with a binding powder to discourage vandalism and carefully covered them with 170 litres of white paint. Toxic whitewash was avoided. Both Roadstone and Sika Paint provided invaluable services. All was now set for the official EIRE Dedication Day of September 24th. In parallel, over the past three years, Dalkey Tidy Towns traced the relatives of four 1939-45 Volunteers and invited them to attend as special guests. Eighty years on, for the very first time, they all met and shared their memories. At an emotional unveiling of the distinctive Information Panels provided by DLRCC, the names of all eleven LOP No.7 volunteers were revealed. For the four families present of Corporal Charles Craney and Volunteers Jimmy Smith, Samuel Williams and Nicholas Kinsella, this truly was a day to remember.

There to congratulate the four families were Minister Mary Mitchell O'Connor, An Cathaoirleach Shay Brennan, Councillors Cormac Devlin, Melisa Halpin, Denis O'Callaghan, Juliet O'Connell, Ossian Smyth and Barry Ward. We were especially honoured also to have present, Lt Colonel Michael Moran of the Irish Air Corps, Commandant Daniel Ayiotis of Military Archives and Dr Michael Kennedy RIA. The Air Corps Helicopter Flyover by Lt Colonel David Corcoran brought this unique EIRE Commemoration Ceremony to a perfect conclusion – and even the sun and blue skies made it a day for Dalkey to remember.

A friend was driving us to Dingle on the same day that Hurricane Lorenzo was due to hit land so, paying heed to the warnings, we thought it safer to stop over at her house in Tipperary where we had a cosy night with mercifully little disturbance from the expected wind and rain. Next morning after breakfast I was warming myself in front of the fire in the room adjoining the kitchen when something flew across the room. At first I thought it was a bird then realised it was a bat which circled between the two rooms before landing on the back of a curtain. The rooms are divided by a sliding glass door and we'd been inspecting its smooth running minutes before so we suspect the bat may have been hibernating or roosting beside the top rail and we had disturbed it. The initial reaction was to catch it and release it since a neighbour's Labrador was snoozing on the settee and, though showing very little interest in our bat capturing attempts, the dog may have later found the little creature which by now was almost at floor level though still firmly grasping the curtain. I was able to ease it off the curtain and hold it in my hand, its tiny heart pounding. It was probably a Pipistrelle, a species of bat which frequently roost in houses. You might think bats would have a leathery skin but it was pleasantly soft and furry to hold though its tiny teeth were very sharp which it demonstrated by little bites on my hand.

I had thought to release it outside but our friend who had experienced roosting or hibernating bats in her house before told me it might be disorientated by being released into daylight and strong winds. On a previous occasion she'd found another bat entangled behind a picture frame. She'd been able to feed it liquid which it lapped up then quite happily clasped on to her Aran sweater as she walked around the house. She tucked this one gently into a towel and left it alone in a room till it settled down and later we took the little bundle into a derelict cottage and left it on a shelf. The house we were overnighting in is usually unoccupied and the bat wouldn't have any way of getting out if the weather was mild and it wanted to hunt so the old abandoned house was a much better option where it could come and go at will through open roof and windows which facilitate at least three pairs of nesting swallows during the summer. It seemed calm and settled and hopefully it would find a safer roost there for the winter.

We were glad we'd delayed our journey since the next day when we arrived at the Dingle Peninsula it was drenched in sunshine. We drove to Dunmore Head and stopped at a picnic bench overlooking a spectacular vista of sea and islands, a perfect spot to eat a few snacks. We were joined there by a surprising visitor when we were approached by a Meadow Pipit. Normally a shy bird of farms, elevated land and mountains which wouldn't normally be found near human habitation this individual was almost indifferent to us, approaching within inches and darting between our feet where we threw it a few crumbs.

Behind us on Dunmore Head a number of those exclusively coast dwelling members of the crow family, the Chough, flew out over the cliffs. With a long curved red bill and red legs the Chough (pronounced chuff) is supposedly named after the sound of its call though I can never reconcile the sharp, almost metallic, call it makes with the soft pronunciation of its name.

Although thankfully Hurricane Lorenzo didn't bring as much havoc as feared it did bring to Ireland a number of birds from the United States who would have been migrating south but were blown off course and carried across the Atlantic. It's not uncommon to get a few American birds every autumn but these winds carried in some surprising species and the rarest was a unfortunate Least Bittern, the first ever record for this species in Ireland which turned up in a garden in Kerry. The poor creature only survived a short while after being found but a lot of other US species were spotted around the country including a Baltimore Oriole, a Black and White Warbler, a Common Nighthawk in Ballymena and a handful of Red-Eyed Vireos. These particular birds were identified by birdwatchers who knew what they were looking at but undoubtedly there must have been numerous other birds blown in who went unseen. It's extremely unlikely these birds will recross the Atlantic and find their original flight path, they might head south to Africa instead of going to South America but basically they're lost forever which is sad.

I'd reached the top of the steps going up from the mid-level of Dalkey quarry and stopped to get my breath back when I heard the deep resonant call of a raven behind me. There was a flock of crows wheeling over the quarry and I expected to see among them the much larger shape of a raven being mobbed but then realised they were in fact all ravens (an 'Unkindness'), a great cacophony of croaks emitting from them. I counted them a few times until I was certain of my count. There were 15 of them, a very impressive number though I'd seen big flocks before, 29 in one group, over Dalkey, nearly always in Autumn. Whether they were family groups or juvenile birds who haven't yet paired and established a territory I'll never know but they were an impressive sight. I continued my walk after viewing the flock of ravens and on the other side of the hill overlooking Killiney Bay three swallows winged past, skimming a few inches above the gorse, almost certainly the last of their species I was to see this year creature which would be soon disappearing from sight till next spring is our only native reptile the Common Lizard not heading south of course but hibernating. By November they should have already tucked themselves away for the

on one day in early October we saw five

We are now working on our new theme in the Green School Programme. This years' theme is Global Citizenship and Energy. We recently formed a new committee in school and we are looking forward to a busy year ahead, playing our part to help the environment.

At the end of September, we embarked on a mission to clean up Dalkey as part of An Taisce's Clean Coast initiative. Our teacher and two parents came with us. Before we left the school, we were given gloves, litter pickers and High-Vis vests. We went down Harbour Road towards Bullock Harbour. We stayed in Bullock Harbour for about 15 minutes, before walking back to school by Ulverton Road. We collected a large bag of rubbish that contained plastic bottles, cigarette butts, sweet wrappers, shoes and one girl even found a five euro note! We eventually returned to school, feeling tired and hungry, but very proud of ourselves.

It is important not to litter. When rubbish goes into the sea, fish and animals can get tangled in it or they can ingest it. We must protect marine life and not litter.

RATHDOWN HOCKEY

Our First Year girls had a fantastic time watching the Irish Women's Hockey team win 4-2 against China at the National Hockey Stadium in UCD last month. They got to meet some of their role models too.

Our Junior School Hockey teams in 5th and 6th class were delighted to host St Gerard's Junior School for a hockey blitz in Rathdown School. The sun was shining and a great afternoon was had by all.

First Year hockey teams have been very busy playing against lots of other school teams this month and getting to school early for hockey skills practice before school.

Card trading in the picnic area

PICNIC AREA AT HAROLD BOYS' N.S.

In our school yard we have four picnic tables. Three of these are for the boys to play at, and one picnic table is known as our 'Quiet Corner' where boys can go to relax and have some quiet time. Normally, most of the boys are either off playing various ball-sports in the yard or running around playing chase. However, recently the number of boys at the picnic tables has greatly increased. Boys from every class (2nd - 6th) have begun exchanging popular trading cards. The two most popular types of trading cards are Pokémon and Match Attax.

Pokémon are a selection of creatures that have various strengths, which give the cards their value. This has been a popular phenomenon among children for many years now and the boys seem to still be as interested as ever.

Match Attax is a trading card game featuring the best players in the UEFA Champions League. This is not surprising that the boys trade these cards as most of the boys have a keen interest in soccer or even play themselves with their local club Dalkey United.

It is great to see all of the different classes playing together each day at the picnic tables, long may it last!

BEACH SCHOOL

We have had a fantastic start to 6th class, diving straight into Scoil Fharraige. We met at Sandycove each Thursday in October. We are so lucky to be able to learn in the outdoors and we helped our community by doing some litter picking. Apart from it being hugely educational it has been great fun with beautiful weather.

In week 1 the tide was out so it was rock pool time. We had a wonderful time exploring the rock pools and learning all about the sea, its environs and the different types of seaweed.

In week 2 the tide was in, so we went along the pier as far as the Lighthouse at the end.

Week 3 we got to go back to the rock pools and see what sea-creatures we could find – just to observe them, not to take them back to school!

And finally in week 4 we got to visit the Maritime Museum which was amazing.

Afterwards we worked in teams to do a project about what we had seen and learned over the four weeks. Our themes were 'Shells and Fossils' and 'Seaweed'

What a great way to start the school year – our very last one in Dalkey School Project.

Enjoying the fruits of the apple press

Apple Press Day -Following the success of St Patricks Apple Press and Strike for Climate last year. On Friday 20th September, we invited our school community to join in another fun day of Apple Pressing while supporting the Global Strikers Day. While we enjoyed the fruits of our Apple trees - the children took time to consider the efforts of the pollinators that ensure we reap the harvest, and the Biodiversity needed to support us

Thanks to Katie O'Brien & Gavin Harte for providing the apple press and making the day a great success. Thanks also to the many families who contributed apples from their gardens for the event.

Dalkey Creates – We are delighted to have been asked, once again, to take part in the Wheelbarrow initiative by Dalkey Creates. 1st/2nd class teacher, Ms. Newton and Classroom Assistant Angie Byrne, will work with the children to sow and tend the wheelbarrows which will be brought to Dalkey Town in November for the presentation morning.

Strictly Dancing – We are delighted to announce that PTA have launched their biggest ever fundraising campaign with Strictly Dancing. This will take place on Saturday 21st March in Fitzpatrick's Castle Hotel, Killiney. This promises to be an amazing fun-filled event and we are looking forward to support from the whole community of Dalkey.

NOVEMBER

Believed to derive from 'novem' which is the Latin for the number 'nine'. In the ancient Roman calendar November was the ninth month after March. As part of the seasonal calendar November is the time of the 'Snow Moon' according to Pagan beliefs and the period described as the 'Moon of the Falling Leaves' by Black Elk. The Anglo-Saxons called November 'Windmonath' or 'Wind-month'.

For the first time. Dalkey Rowing Club had a crew in The Great River Race - the 34 km row along the Thames. It starts at Millwall and ends in Teddington. It's a busy sight with over 300 fixed seat rowing boats of all kinds, ranging from regal Thames skiffs to powerful Polynesian outrigger canoes. At the start, the river is chock a block with boats. There are flags, colours and fancy dress outfits of all kinds and the atmosphere leading up to the start is fizzing. Almost as soon as you set off you pass under the mighty Tower Bridge. Despite the seriously (and surprisingly) choppy water, the bridge is as mighty a sight from the water as it is from land. You continue down the river past some of the key sight of London including the Tower of London, The London Eye, St Pauls' Cathedral, The Houses of Parliament, Battersea Power Station, The Gherkin to name but a few, finishing up in the stunning Ham House and Gardens. The setting is amazing and the welcome warm. It was a really sunny day which, when combined with the choppy conditions, made it a challenging row, but it was worth it.

NOVEMBER IN MY GARDEN Philippa Thomas

Don't our four seasons provide a constantly changing Dalkey landscape? Did you notice that local councils in the U.K. and Here reduced the mowing of roadside verges, sowing them with wild flower seed mixes, such schemes not only make urban spaces more visibly alive with interest but provide valuable food sources for pollinators.

Then, wonder did you spot any of our local native orchids ?? "The word orchid carries a potent exotic charge, boosted by the large, flashy, tropical species sold in supermarkets. This can create expectations that may make many of us miss Ireland's exquisite but less conspicuous members of this enchanting family". "Ireland has 30 native species, one of which the Western Marsh Orchid is unique to the island" — Paddy Woodworth.

Orchid Hotspots – "Bull Island is just one of a number of orchid hotspots across the country. Other well known havens include The Burren, The Raven Nature Reserve, Wexford, The Cloheen Strand Intake near Clonakilty, Ballyheigue Kerry, Mullaghmore, Sligo embankments and quarries near Enniskillen and the islands and peninsulas of Donegal. ...But, once you get your eye in you don't have to go to hotspots to find orchids. The Pyramidal Orchid may be found, in cracked pavements of a main street, and the two spotted-orchid species, heath and common, turn up across a range of habitats." – Paddy Woodworth, The Irish Times on Sat July 13th 2019.

Brendan Sayers, founder of our Irish Orchid Society in June 2001 and Glasshouse Foreman, National Botanic Gardens says, "A single species may manifest itself in a maddening variety of different ways. The existence, or otherwise of a distinct species is indeed critical for proper allocation of scarce conservation resources".

Now, that November is here, our leaves are twisting, twirling, turning around and almost dancing while falling on the ground. As our Autumn turns to Winter, it is getting colder and wetter and our Summer blooms are fading into sodden brown mulch. Our Dalkey Gardens are undergoing a lot of change as our colours begin to fade. Isn't it lovely to get outside into the garden on mild days and clean up. Best to rake up leaves as piles of leaves cut out the light and will cause the grass underneath to go brown and look unsightly. November is a time of beautiful transition with things really slowing down in our gardens due to the arrival of Winter – Remember, song birds need to build up fat reserves to help them survive our colder Winter months. Our shorter days and frosts trigger plants to shut down but the shutting down is spectacular, the vital green chlorophyll is dismantled. In colder regions when the severe frosts blacken the leaves and stems of dahlias and canna lilies, lift the roots and store in a frost free shed. - Remember, it only takes one night of frost to damage or even kill off some garden plants. Make sure you take into your greenhouse or cover anything vulnerable to the weather with garden fleece or the likes. – There is still time to collect seed from any late flowers. Its best to sow the seed straight away in pots in the coldframe as it's more likely to germinate, maybe cover the surface of the compost with grit to help stop moss from growing -. This too, is the perfect time to take cuttings of tender plants, such as salvias and plectranthus. These plants will be much easier to overwinter in a light, frost free place than their much larger parent plants.

Cut under a pair of leaves and then remove the bottom sets so that no leaves are under the compost when you insert the cuttings, - So go on, root some cuttings, Why Not.

Winter Plants and Spring Bulbs – As you empty summer pots, fill them with Winter and Spring flowering plants and bulbs. The quicker you do this, the longer they will have to grow before our colder weather sets in. Ferns, some palms and tree ferns can grow really well in terracotta pots. Bulbs look so great in a collection on your doorstep or on a small outside table under a window, maybe outside your office window or kitchen, so that you can admire and enjoy the scent of some beauties, such as Hyacinths and Narcissus. One can become obsessed with pots and how to get them looking better and better every year and yet, - not take over our lives. Some people like intense, jam-packed, 'get-the-most-out-of-every-square-inch' garden style from Spring to the tail end of Winter. I visited a friend's garden last week, its owner had woven a carpet of colour and texture that confused the eye, into believing, it is all planted in the ground rather than in pots. Why not review your horticultural successes and failures and plan for the next gardening year before we get into the Christmas Mania.

MAYBE CONSIDER: Removing the growing-tip of wallflowers will encourage them to produce side shoots and make bushier plants. Compost bags are not recyclable. Most bags made from LDPE (low-density polyethylene), ideal, they are though, for growing potatoes and can act as a weed barrier or hanging basket liner.

Some trees are grown for their attractive bark such as The Himalayan Birch, (Betula Utilis) which can lose its sparkling appearance of its bark. Wipe the bark with a wet warm cloth to bring back bright whiteness.

Winter heating and likewise, underfloor heating can dry the air out in our homes so help house plants to survive by misting them or placing the pots on a pebble filled tray of water to enable adequate humidity and moisture. Maybe, get out there and improvise some suitable protection for plants and structures that might be affected by the wilder weather to come. Among the most colourful of flowers in our Autumn garden with increasingly variable flower species, is the Nerine or Diamond Lily. Maybe, seek out a good variety and plant at base of a sunny wall or cramp into a gritty soil based pot, so that the tip of the bulbs show above the compost surface.

Please do your bit by not buying plants sold in black plastic pots which can't be easily recycled. Beth Chatos Garden Nursery U.K. gives 5p off plants bought for every pot in good clean condition returned. Beware that manure can be contaminated with herbicides. Research by Indiana USA and the University of Nottingham has revealed that Chinese bracken fern could be the key to clearing up contaminated soil. The plant takes up arsenic from the soil and holds the toxins in its leaves.

'It is the very act of gardening that I would not nor could not be without. It is what thrills me, (most of the time!) and keeps me grounded.' - Philippa.

Q. My daughter has been diagnosed with Asthma and has been prescribed inhalers – what are they being used for?

A. Asthma is a condition that affects the airway where it becomes over sensitive and causes occasional breathing difficulties. The main symptoms are wheezing, breathlessness, a feeling of tightness in the chest and coughing.

Common triggers for asthma include allergens (such as dust, animal fur and pollen), other irritants (such as smoke, gases and cold air), exercise and chest infections. Using the right inhalers will relieve the symptoms and control the condition to minimise a flare up.

Asthma is considered to be well controlled if:

- There are no daytime or night time symptoms
- There is no need to use a reliever inhaler more than twice a week
- The patient has good lung function

Treatment in asthma is usually by means of an inhaler although additional therapies may be added in if this is not sufficient. Step one of treatment is a blue (reliever) inhaler. This temporarily opens the airways by relaxing the muscles. This is used to treat the tightness in the chest on feeling the symptoms or before exercise to prevent it occurring. It should not to be used routinely more than twice a week. They are generally very well tolerated with very little side effects.

The other type of inhaler used is the Preventer inhaler (usually brown but can vary in colour). This controls and dampens down inflammation and swelling in the airways which reduces the risk of a severe attack. They work best by building up in airways over time (up to 14 days) so it is important they are taken every day even when you are feeling well. They usually contain a low dose of steroids and the lowest effective dose is what is normally used. As they have a local action in the lungs very little is absorbed into the rest of the body which means there is no concern of the long term side effects of steroids. The main risk is of developing thrush in the mouth or hoarseness of the voice. This can be avoided by brushing your teeth or by taking a drink of water immediately after using inhaler.

If your asthma is still not sufficiently controlled (i.e. still needing reliever inhaler) you should contact your prescriber as they may need to add in additional medication.

An important aspect of asthma control is inhaler technique. Your Pharmacist or Doctor can observe you using your inhaler in case the technique is an issue. It is important the drug particles are delivered to the correct part of the lungs and not deposited on the back of the throat. Using a spacer device encourages the particles to deposit in the correct place and this is especially recommended with children.

If you experience an asthma attack – follow the five step rule:

- 1 Take two puffs of the reliever inhaler
- 2 Sit upright and stay calm
- 3 Take slow deep breaths
- 4 If no immediate improvement take one puff of the reliever inhaler every minute (up to 10 puffs in 10 minutes or for children up to 6 puffs in 10 minutes)

PUBLICATIONS

"Return to Sender - Revisiting John Hinde's Ireland" by Paul Kelly, published by Gill Books.

In the 1950s John Hinde was a pioneer of colour photography and excelled in the production and publication of colour postcards of Ireland which recorded Ireland at that time but portrayed a country brightened by his imagination in which children were redhaired and freckled, the sun always shone, the sky was forever blue, golden beaches, and of telegraph poles, electric pylons and their associated wires absent from the rural landscape.

The author's father who was living in America, frequently visited Ireland and sent home some of Hinde's iconic postcards. The author later visited Ireland and following his father's death in 2015, relocated to Ireland from California and set about capturing modern day versions of Hinde's iconic images.

This fascinating book pairs Hinde's instantly recognisable postcards on one page with the author's modern day comparison photographs featured on the opposite ones and these new images show how these locations have changed or in some cases not at all.

This is a truly remarkable book using the 'Then & Now' format which anyone interested in Ireland or postcard image of Ireland will enjoy. The images in this book are re-produced to a very high image standard, and Gill Books are to be complimented with its publication.

Dalkey takes home gold again at the Helix Theatre in the SuperValu National Tidy Towns Competition

RTE Comperes Mary Kennedy and Anne Cassin featured this major annual event on Nationwide which highlighted the great work carried out by Tidy Towns groups throughout Ireland.

With a record 918 Towns entered this year, Dalkey was thrilled to be awarded its largest ever increase of eight points in the Adjudicators' scores. This delivered a GOLD MEDAL for DALKEY in our population category, plus a Highly Commended distinction in the County Awards. This puts Dalkey in the top 6% of all 918 entrants.

Of those few who earned a Gold Medal this year, the overall National Award finally went to Glaslough in County Monaghan who are now just 10 points ahead of Dalkey. Many congratulations to all in Glaslough.

The Adjudicators especially congratulated Dalkey on Community Work, Streetscapes and Public Places, Green Spaces and Landscaping, Nature and Biodiversity, Sustainability, Tidiness, Litter and Graffiti Control, Residential Streets and Approach Roads. In other words, we have made great progress in all these important areas. Their few criticisms were on kerb weeds and the Tramyard site appearance in Castle Street. Our DTT volunteers had actually cleared over 8km of kerb weeds by hand this Summer! However, the correct decision by DLRCC to stop using harmful pesticides left a major problem yet to be solved. Hopefully, the Tramyard issue will be resolved in 2020.

All in our Dalkey Towns Team want to say a BIG THANK YOU to our neighbours, friends and DLRCC for their much appreciated support this year. Earning an additional eight points from the Adjudicators was an outstanding achievement. Already, our ambitions for next year are pushing us further. If our neighbours can help with trimming their roadside hedges and litter, this could make all the difference and give our volunteers more time for some exciting new projects.

WHAT'S ON IN DALKEY LIBRARY

Winter is upon us and, for many, there is the temptation to hibernate for the next few months! However, the library has a range of events planned which may tempt you out of the house down to join us.

For the budding musicians amongst us, a GarageBand music technology workshop will take place on Saturday November 9th at 2pm. Suitable for those over 10 years, participants will be learning how to create and edit their own digital music, definitely not to be missed. Staying with our musical theme and in association with Music generation dlr, Family Ukulele Classes are continuing in the library this month and are free to join with no experience necessary. Classes take place once a week and all instruments are provided.

We are delighted to be participating in the Dalkey Creates Festival and are hosting a number of special events for Dalkey Creates Junior. Book Doctor consultations with Children's Books Ireland will be taking place on Thursday November 28th from 3.30pm where a panel of Book Doctors will be ready with the best advice for the young readers in your family. On the morning of Friday 29th we will be hosting "Messy Babies" with Me and the Moon, a great opportunity to get messy with your little one through exploring mixed media like paint and clay. To draw our festival events to a close, Fabadoodle Doggie Drawing workshops will be taking place on the morning of Saturday 30th where participants will see some famous dogs from children's literature come to life and draw their own doggie. It will be a busy weekend! Adults certainly won't be forgotten, and the Season of

Craft workshops for adults are continuing on Saturday 16th when we will be hosting origami workshops as well as Saturday 30th with Scandinavian Wreath Making.

Once again, we are delighted to welcome students from Loreto and Clonkeen College who are running one-on-one sessions in the use of devices such as ipads, smart phones, and tablet computers. These hourly tutorials take place on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons so if you are having trouble with your device and need help with downloading apps, accessing online resources or anything else, do get in touch to book a session.

For more information on any of the above, you can call us on 01-2855277 or get in touch via email or social media @dlrlibraries. Looking forward to seeing you soon!

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Perhaps it's timely with the approach of winter to draw attention to the following, viz.:

- 1. The necessity for drivers to check ALL lighting on their cars, especially the indicators and the Dipped Beam headlights.
- 2. NEVER drive on Full Beam headlights as that blinds oncoming drivers and dazzles those whom you drive behind, and will most likely cause a serious accident.
- 3. For cyclists; Do It Right: i.e., don't forget your LIGHTS, wear something BRIGHT, when you CYCLE at night.

Be seen, stay ALIVE!!

Finally, Remember: NEVER, EVER drink alcohol and DRIVE!

Oh! How Television (and Radio) has changed over the years . . .

Alas more changes are on the way with regard to Terrestrial Television. To comply with EU directive (2017/899) more of the television spectrum is going to be allocated to 5G mobile. As a result RTE (and many other European broadcasters) will be moving frequency between now and March of next year, and unfortunately some viewers who received UK channels from Northern Ireland (using a roof top aerial) will lose reception, and for technical reasons will no longer be able to receive these channels from a terrestrial aerial. The alternatives are a satellite system, internet television, or a connection to a cable provider.

This frequency change cost RTE € 7 million, having to purchase new transmitters and towers.
